

CORPORATE ENERGY TRAINING

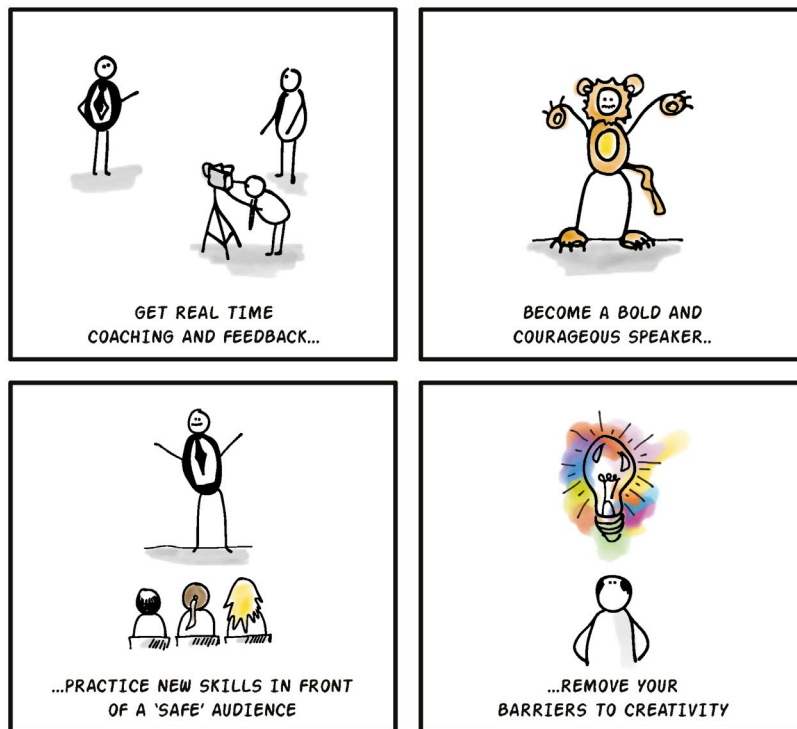

2 Days

Learn the skills needed to entertain an audience whilst taking their active engagement to a new level! Leave the group invigorated, confident, full of new ideas and impatient to get back to work to try it all out!

Culturally, business has become dominated with long meetings, dry content driven training sessions and dull PowerPoint presentations. These have the impact of 'sucking' energy from our people, breaking down relationships and destroying productivity.

The 2-day Corporate Energy programme is an interactive highly challenging programme. You are required to develop your own material in the sessions and are then individually coached whilst delivering it. The combination of live presenting, feedback and refined practice allows you to hone this skill set in front of 'safe audience', in a positive environment.

The programme teaches you how to make sure the presenter stays the focus for the audience (not the slides), how to energise audiences while learning to balance entertainment with content delivery. Other important skills learnt range from storytelling, showmanship, facilitation skills and how to respond to hostile audiences.

About the Programme

This programme is written by renowned speaker Chris Atkinson based on the philosophy and content of his book 'Corporate Energy: How to Engage and Inspire Audiences'. The book is available from all major retailers in both print and ebook editions, published by New Leadership Press.
